Role Play Situation #1

You are at the movies with your best friend, and really looking forward to watching the movie. All during the previews, the person sitting behind you has been talking loudly on his cell phone. You were hoping that once the movie started, he would turn it off but he is still talking on the phone and you are having trouble following the movie (it’s an action flick, the kind that you really need to pay attention to so you don’t miss what’s going on). What should you do?

Role Play Situation #2

You are at the library working on a group project. One of the members of your group has a loud (and vulgar) ring tone that keeps going off. Your group can’t get any work done, because her phone is constantly ringing. What’s worse is that she sits right there at the table and has her whole conversation while everyone listens and waits for her to finish. What should you do?

Role Play Situation #3

You and a friend decide to go get something to eat after practice. He decides to drive. It’s already dark, and pouring rain. On the way, his cell phone starts ringing. What do you do?

Role Play Situation #4

Your best friend meets you afterschool in tears. She explains that someone keeps sending her nasty text messages on her cell phone. She says she’s too embarrassed to tell a teacher, and she wants to confront the bully herself. She asks you to go with her. What do you do?
